The Uncertain Legacy of Crisis: European Foreign Policy Faces the Future

A Public Lecture by Dr Richard Youngs
Senior Associate at Carnegie Europe and Professor at Warwick University

The European Union is mired in the worst crisis it has seen for many decades. And the crisis does not stop at Europe’s edge. It threatens to undercut the EU’s ambitions to develop a coherent and active foreign policy, but it is also forcing European states to re-evaluate their approach to security and defence.

Richard Youngs examines the legacy of the crisis and what it will mean for the EU’s international role. The fallout undermines the EU’s foreign policy capacity and tarnishes its normative brand, compelling some member states to focus on realpolitik and their own national-level policies. But there are also signs of enhanced European cooperation, greater international ambition, and deepened commitment to the values of a liberal world order. Youngs details how the EU can craft an effective foreign policy strategy while confronting an internal economic crisis and a reshaped global order.

Richard Youngs is a senior associate in the Democracy and Rule of Law Program, based at Carnegie Europe. He is an expert on the foreign policy of the European Union, in particular on questions of democracy support. He has published widely on the Middle East, the European neighborhood, the current EU crisis, and energy security.

Youngs is also a professor of international relations at Warwick University. Prior to joining Carnegie in July 2013, he was director of the Madrid- and Brussels-based think tank FRIDE. He also held positions in the UK Foreign and Commonwealth Office and as an EU Marie Curie fellow. He was senior fellow at the Transatlantic Academy in Washington, DC, from 2012 to 2013. He obtained his BA (Hons) at Cambridge University and his MA and Ph.D from Warwick University.

Youngs’s interests focus on the development of EU foreign policy, European responses to the Arab Spring, trends in international democracy, and current debates over democracy promotion strategies. He has written several books on different elements of European external policy and published over forty articles and working papers, while writing regularly in national and international media. His latest work and seventh book, The Uncertain Legacy of Crisis: European Foreign Policy Faces the Future, was published in January 2014.

The EU Centre in Singapore presents

The Uncertain Legacy of Crisis: European Foreign Policy Faces the Future

A Public Lecture by Dr Richard Youngs
Senior Associate at Carnegie Europe and Professor at Warwick University

The European Union is mired in the worst crisis it has seen for many decades. And the crisis does not stop at Europe’s edge. It threatens to undercut the EU’s ambitions to develop a coherent and active foreign policy, but it is also forcing European states to re-evaluate their approach to security and defence.

Richard Youngs examines the legacy of the crisis and what it will mean for the EU’s international role. The fallout undermines the EU’s foreign policy capacity and tarnishes its normative brand, compelling some member states to focus on realpolitik and their own national-level policies. But there are also signs of enhanced European cooperation, greater international ambition, and deepened commitment to the values of a liberal world order. Youngs details how the EU can craft an effective foreign policy strategy while confronting an internal economic crisis and a reshaped global order.

Richard Youngs is a senior associate in the Democracy and Rule of Law Program, based at Carnegie Europe. He is an expert on the foreign policy of the European Union, in particular on questions of democracy support. He has published widely on the Middle East, the European neighborhood, the current EU crisis, and energy security.

Youngs is also a professor of international relations at Warwick University. Prior to joining Carnegie in July 2013, he was director of the Madrid- and Brussels-based think tank FRIDE. He also held positions in the UK Foreign and Commonwealth Office and as an EU Marie Curie fellow. He was senior fellow at the Transatlantic Academy in Washington, DC, from 2012 to 2013. He obtained his BA (Hons) at Cambridge University and his MA and Ph.D from Warwick University.

Youngs’s interests focus on the development of EU foreign policy, European responses to the Arab Spring, trends in international democracy, and current debates over democracy promotion strategies. He has written several books on different elements of European external policy and published over forty articles and working papers, while writing regularly in national and international media. His latest work and seventh book, The Uncertain Legacy of Crisis: European Foreign Policy Faces the Future, was published in January 2014.